THE SAND DUNES

Did you know we have a nature reserve at Lytham St Anne's? The sand dunes attract huge numbers of wild fowl, waders and 280 different plant species.

Over the last 150 years, more than 80% of the dunes have been lost, but a project funded by the Environment Agency is working to improve the dunes as a sea defence feature by encouraging natural dune growth.

The dunes act as a barrier to the sea at high tide and release sand during storm conditions to reduce wave action, as well as a busy habitat for insects, birds, and plants. Since 2013, there have been over 60 metres of cumulative dune growth by planting 11,000 recycled Christmas trees buried on the beach to build dunes and with 6,500 volunteer hours contributed, 3,000 students involved in the Beach School Programme, 500 guided walks run by knowledgeable volunteers and the introduction of 400 sand lizards.

Guided tours take place on the first Sunday of every month and start from 10 am at North Beach, St Annes. These free tours aim to promote the importance of the dunes and provide information about the project and local wildlife
